

Cloud-to-Cloud Backup for Office 365

Continuous productivity, efficiency, and availability.

You've got a security solution in place, keeping your data and IP safe in the cloud, but do you have it backed-up and recoverable should the worst happen?

What are the key benefits of adding additional backup and recovery capabilities to Office 365?

Office 365	Additional Measures
Retains all data in the operational environment where it's at risk of amendment or deletion.	Retain a separate immutable copy outside of the operational environment in a separate secure repository.
Retention is limited to just age or location.	Retention has more flexibility and granularity which you need to meet compliance requirements.
Basic Document Versioning and point-in-time recovery.	Comprehensive document versioning, meaning you can revert to a specific version of a document quickly and easily.
Multiple folders are used to secure email data against modification or deletion, but this means there is no easy way to demonstrate that you are keeping a complete and accurate copy of every email sent and received.	Detailed reporting and audit logging means you'll know exactly where both unmodified and modified email data is being held.
Archiving solution is only available as part of the Office 365 E3 and E5 plans.	Reliable archiving that can be integrated with all plans.
	Centralised management system allowing you to control user access and privileges.
	Encryption of data in transit and at rest.

Why do you need Backup for Office 365?

Microsoft Office 365's standard backup capabilities only offer limited controls, with no automated scheduling and restricted levels of data retention.

If you want to be confident that in the result of a cyberattack, file corruption, or incident caused by human error you'd be able to quickly and easily recover your data, you'll want a more comprehensive solution.
